

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Chronology: The Professional Journey of Jean Quataert	xii
Introduction. Beginnings, Not Ends Kathleen Canning and Jennifer V. Evans	1
Part I. Negotiating Gender
Chapter 1. Strategic Communities: Gender Self-Fashioning, Political Dissent, and the Search for Homosexual Rights in Wilhelmine Germany Glenn B. Ramsey	17
Chapter 2. “Why Do We Need the German Colonial Women’s League?” Colonial Women’s Activism in Wartime and Weimar Germany, 1914–1926 K. Molly O’Donnell	37
Chapter 3. Marie Juchacz and Toni Sender: Socialism, Women’s Emancipation, and Weimar Politics William Smaldone	61
Chapter 4. Gender Anxieties and Censorship in Weimar: Aufklärungsfilm and Article 118 Kara Ritzheimer	83
Part II. Mobilizing Human Rights
Chapter 5. Victimhood and the Politics of Memory: The Expulsions of Danube Swabians from Yugoslavia, 1944–1948 Ute Ritz-Deutch	107

Chapter 6. Coming to Grips with American Racism: Anne Moody's Human Rights Advocacy in Germany during the Late Cold War Leigh Ann Wheeler	131
Chapter 7. Contested Progress: Women and Women's Studies in the East and West German Historical Profession Karen Hagemann	157
Chapter 8. Reluctant Activists: Human Rights, Cleveland's Religious Left, and El Salvador Shelley E. Rose	191
Chapter 9. How Do People Use Human Rights, and What Happens When They Do?: A Conversation with Jean H. Quataert Lora Wildenthal	208
Afterword. Jean Quataert and the Politics of the Personal Belinda Davis	232
Index	237