Contents

List of Illustrations vii

Acknowledgements viii

A Note on Transcription ix

Introduction 1

Part I. Moving through the Practico-Sensory Realm of Space

1. Spatial Textures of the Clinical Encounter 45

2. Misunderstandings, and the Spaces They Create 82

Part II. Emplacement, Emplotment, 'Empotment'

3. Patients, Practitioners and Their Pots 119

4. The Patients 145

5. The Practitioners 190

6. The Pots: Orientations 238

Part III. Pots, 'Pots' and Pots

7. What Is in a 'Pot'? Industrially Produced Chinese Formula Medicines 263

Chinese Medicine in East Africa
An Intimacy with Strangers
Elisabeth Hsu
https://www.berghahnbooks.com/title/HsuChinese
Not for resale

8. What Makes a Pot Efficacious? Social Distance, and the Potencies of Pots 303

9. 'The Chinese Antimalarial' as 'Pot' and Pot 343

Conclusion. Kaleidoscopic Refractions 367

References 374

Index 413

Chinese Medicine in East Africa
An Intimacy with Strangers
Elisabeth Hsu
https://www.berghahnbooks.com/title/HsuChinese
Not for resale