

CONTENTS

List of Figures	vii
Acknowledgments	viii
Introduction
Children, the Nation, and the World Simone Lässig and Andreas Weiß	1
Part I. Official Knowledge
Chapter 1
New Words and the New World: Language and the Transnational Legacy of Joachim Heinrich Campe's Robinson der Jüngere Kirsten Belgium	37
Chapter 2
Images of Land and Sea : Experiencing the World as Adventure through Theodor Dielitz's Travel Anthologies for Young Readers, 1841–62 Matthew O. Anderson	57
Chapter 3
World Knowledge in Textbooks for French-Language Teaching in the Nineteenth Century in Germany Regina Schleicher	81
Chapter 4
The World at War in German Textbooks: Knowledge of the World Conveyed in Representations of War Andreas Weiß	93
Chapter 5
When Nippon Became Prussian: The German Image of Japan in Nineteenth-Century Textbooks Maik Fiedler	113

Part II. Literary Knowledge

Chapter 6

- Thrilling Hearts and Winning Minds: The Representation of Monarchy,
Navy, and Empire in Nineteenth-Century Juvenile Adventure Fiction 137
Miriam Magdalena Schneider

Chapter 7

- Knowing Others as Selves: German Children and American Indians 159
H. Glenn Penny

Chapter 8

- “Don’t You Take Pity on Your Little Brothers and Sisters in China?”
Missionary Literature for Children and the Distribution of Relational
Knowledge in Imperial Germany 182
Katharina Stornig

Part III. Knowledge in Entertainment

Chapter 9

- Around the World in a Jiffy: Humorous Treatments of Around-the-World Travel in German Children’s Books and Games 203
Emer O’Sullivan

Chapter 10

- The Rise of the Trading Card: Collecting the World before World War I 228
Judith Blume

Chapter 11

- A World Made for Exploration: Germans and Their Toys, 1890–1914 252
David Hamlin

Conclusion

- Kaleidoscope and Lens: Re-envisioning the Past through the History of Knowledge 272
Simone Lässig

- Index 295